There is no alternative (shortened as TINA) was a slogan which Margaret Thatcher, the right wing British Prime Minister used often. In economics, politics, and political economy, it has come to mean that "there is no alternative" to the status quo of their economic system and neoliberalism.^{[1][2]} This is the main slogan of neoliberalism, arguing that free markets, free trade, and capitalist globalization are the only way in which modern societies can go, as any deviation from their doctrine is certain to lead to disaster. Susan George, a prominent critic of neoliberal globalization disagrees by saying "TATA!" (There Are Thousands of Alternatives), which also refers to the main political slogan of the alter-globalization movement: "another world is possible".

The Mekons - Tina

It looks like an accident
Caused by the government
Good people with good intent
Paving the highway down
It seeps into the water
Where the bad side is burning
And it's not where they lead us
It's in the act of turning
The way things are geared here
The way it's all framed
The names are named
And now they're all naming names
They're putting on human faces
Say "There is no alternative"
Carved in stone
And I want nothing
It's what I'm trained to believe in
But I can still dream of things
That have never been
But someday will be
